Educators Have Various Views

One Takes View that Belittling Teachers Will Bring About National Suicide.

(By Associated Press.)

DENVER, July 7.—"Belittling teachers may bring national suicide; teachers must be regarded as leaders if the future is to be satisfying," said James W. Robertson, president of MacDonald college of Quebec, to the National Educational association. "An unlettered rural teacher is called a professor as is a corn doctor, dog trainer or clown. No difference whether it is university, college or normal school, it is what is taught that does the business," was the hot shot Henry C. Williams, dean of the Ohio state normal, fired at the opponents of the normal schools. Robertson would ally the rural with the agricultural schools to keep boys on the farm. J. Y. Joyner, head of the South Carolina schools, who is fighting Ben Blewett, superintendent of St. Louis schools, said the latter was the "book trust" candidate for the presidency.

AN OLD SPORT RELATES STORY OF MOUNT ODDIE

"Today I stood and gazed at Old Glory as it floated proudly from the flagstaff on the top of Mount Oddie," said the old sport. I thought as I watched it unfolding to the breeze of the centuries that must have elapsed in the making of that grand old mountaintop before the treasures hidden in its bosom were revealed to man.

"I stood there like one in a trance; me thought I was living in the vague and distant past. I was here long before the dumps that now speck the landscape were scarce larger than a wart. In those days speculation was rife concerning the future of the camp. As the months rolled on, the work of the leasers was proving that Tonopah had come to stay. And today it stands out as the best camp in a state that has given to the world a long list of celebrities such as Virginia City, Eureka, Austin, Candelaria, Belmont and goodness knows how many more.

"But I must forget the poetic part; it is not of flowers that I wish to speak today. I remember well when I came to Tonopah. There were no railroad connections in those days. The trip was made by stage, and believe me, it was a most tiresome journey. It so happened that the stage I took was driven by a man who had never been over the road before. The coach was well filled, among whom were another gambler besides myself and a newspaperman. We three occupied the rear seat. We had been traveling many miles over the desert, when the newspaperman addressed the gambler with the remark that he wondered why God put so much desert in one place.

"The gambler said nothing until the lights of Tonopah were visible. Mount Oddie loomed up in the darkness like a spectre. Pointing to the mountain, the gambler touched the newspaperman on the shoulder to attract his attention and said in the most philosophic manner, 'Young man, I wonder why God put so much gold and silver in one place.' 'I do not remember that the scribe answered the question of the sport.'
